ABSTRACT

This annotated bibliography focuses on classroom materials for Indochinese students, but also includes teacher-training materials. The bibliography also serves as a practical means of assisting teachers and program coordinators to obtain materials by providing information on publishers, distributors, and listed prices. The bibliography is divided into the following major sections: Indochinese; Vietnamese; Lao and Hmong; Cambodian (Khmer); and Chinese. The above major sections are further subdivided into three subject categories: (1) language arts (includes materials in the primary language or English language and bilingual materials on language arts, dictionaries, readers, translated novels, fables, legends, and fairy tales); (2) social studies (includes materials on the students' culture and history and U.S. History); (3) mathematics and science (includes technical glossaries and dictionaries, bilingual textbooks, and other supplementary materials on mathematics and science). INTRODUCTION

Due to a critical shortage of credentialed Indochinese teachers, materials for Indochinese students play a very important role in schools to bring about quality education for Indochinese students. Teachers without appropriate materials have a difficult task in teaching efficiently. An annotated bibliography becomes an invaluable tool in helping them locate suitable materials.

This bibliography focuses on classroom materials for Indochinese students, but also includes teacher-training materials. Moreover, the bibliography serves as a practical means of assisting teachers and program coordinators to obtain materials by a handy reference to publisher, distributor and listed price.

Besides the work of our capable annotators, some compilation work from existing bibliographies contributed to this book and credit is given to the authors of: An Annotated Bibliography of Indochinese Materials published by the Center for Material Development and Training, Arlington Heights, Illinois, 1979; A Selected Bibliography of Dictionaries and Phrasebooks, published by the Center for Applied Linguistics, Arlington, Virginia, 1980; and Vietnamese Materials, disseminated by Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Scotia, New York, 1979.

The second edition of Materials for Indochinese Students: An Annotated Bibliography incorporates revised titles from the 1983 first printing and is supplemented with new titles obtained and annotated during the 1983-84 school year.

The accompanying User's Guide will assist teachers with details on the different categories of books annotated within this bibliography.

For further information regarding this publication,contact Chuck Acosta or Tuan D. Do at (213) 922-6320.

USER'S GUIDE

The bibliography is divided into the following major sections:

This is one of three ABC booklets by the same author. The obvious aim is to have Lao children learn the English alphabet through the easily identifiable pictures by the students themselves. The illustrations in this booklet are therefore limited to existing items on the school site, and in the classroom in particular. The American teacher can also learn a few Lao words from the pictures and thus will increase his/her self-confidence, and may even create an enthusiastic learning atmosphere in the classroom. Please also see the annotation of At Home, and Food and Drink of the same series.

AT HOME. Emilio R. Castillo; Khampheng Phounsavath, translator. Seattle Public Schools, 1981, 26 pages.

This is one of three booklets developed and illustrated by the same author who aims to teach the English alphabet through the identification of items well known to the student. In this booklet, each page shows a letter, capital and small, and carries well designed illustrations of objects found in or around the house. Eacn illustration is accompanied by a word starting with the same letter. Excellent instructional material for Lao LEP student at K-1 levels.

FOOD AND DRINK. Emilio R. Castillo; Somsy Vongsakdy, translator. Seattle Public Schools, 1981, 26 pages.

All the 26 letters of the English alphabet are clearly illustrated. Next to each picture there is a word to describe it. Children will learn both the name of the letter and survival vocabularies in food and drink. This is another excellent material developed under the direction of Janet Lu to increase the working vocabularies of the Lao LEP students. Please also see annotations on At Home and At School from the same project.

TALES OF MARVEL AND WONDER. University of Iowa, Second Edition, 1981, 71 pages.

Written in Lao, these tales are based on ancient Indochinese stories which were once used to instruct people to be generous and kind toward one another. This book includes 23 fables grouped under five major ideas: the importance of working together, the need for better mutual understanding, the expression of gratitude, the consequences of being untruthful or greedy, and how to choose good friends. This book is a major contribution to the multicultural awareness as well as to the reinforcement of instructional goals of the LEP students. Special language adaptations of the fables are currently available in English, Lao, Vietnamese, Khmer (Cambodian), and Spanish.

Language: Lao — Grades 4-6

TALES OF MARVEL AND WONDER. English-Lao Teacher's Guide, University of Iowa, Second Edition, 1981, 153 pages.

This guide provides the teacher with objectives and exercises for each of the fables included in the student reader, Tales of Marvel and Wonder. The exercises follow the order of the objectives, and have the same numerical designations as the particular sections of objectives to which they correspond. Adaptations of the exercises in English, Lao, Vietnamese, Khmer, and Spanish are available in student workbooks designed to supplement the series.

LAO PRIMER. (Lao Series Number 1), Pragmatics International, Inc., 1979, 68 pages.

The aim of this volume is to teach Lao syllables to Laotian students in grade 1. In Laos, it is known as the Ko-Ka book. It was first published in the early 1940's and subsequently reprinted by the Laotian Ministry of Education, without necessary correction or adjustment. The book contains many mistakes, orthographic and methodological, and does not conform with the spelling system of modern Lao. The present edition from Michigan has all of the above mentioned inaccuracies. It could be used by experienced teachers as reference material, but should not be recommended for formal reading in its present form.

Language: Lao — Grades 1-2
Price: $3.25

LAO FIRST GRADE READER. (Lao Series Number 2), Pragmatics International, Inc., 1979, 156 pages.

The book contains 59 selections (including poems), with subjects ranging from the description of a rural school site to Buddhist morality and traditions. Most selections are not relevant to life in this country. The book could be used in social studies classes for discussion, to build up vocabulary and to stimulate oral language development. The book is also a good model for correct spelling in modern Lao.

Language: Lao — Grades 1-3
Price: $6.00

LAO SECOND GRADE READER. (Lao Series Number 3) Pragmatics International, Inc., 1981, 246 pages.

62 reading selections are contained in this volume. Ideas are developed around such subjects as school, pagoda, family, village, farming, roads and transportation, etc. Each selection is accompanied by a explanatory note on new vocabulary, a few questions on the content of the text, and a suggested subject for composition. Although most of the selections are not relevant to life in the United States, this is a well written book in terms of the structure and the spelling system of modern Lao. Recommended for social studies and oral language development.

Language: Lao — Grades 2-4
Price: $9.75

LAO THIRD GRADE READER. (Lao Series Number 4) Pragmatics International, Inc., 1981, 266 pages.

This book provides pupils in grade 3 with a basic foundation of the Lao language. It contains 93 selections reflecting the Buddhist teachings, behavior patterns, arts, and elementary information on a few Indochinese towns. Each selection is followed by questions on the text, a recapitulation of the story, the grammatical analysis of a sentence, spelling rules, etymology, and a suggested subject for composition. This book is well known and dear to the entire literate population of Laos. Such stories as "The Tongue and the Heart," "Complaints of a Child," or "The Great Stupa in Vientiane" are in this book.

ENGLISH-LAO STUDENT HANDBOOK. Richard P. Murphy, Viengtha Saythongphet and Tou-Fu Vang, translators. APPLE, Inc., 121 pages.

The dialogues contained in this resource book were designed (1) as survival language lessons. (2) to attack the differences between the Lao and English languages. (3) to help Lao students understand American culture and heritage; and (4) as self-instruction dialogues. Each dialogue is given in Lao and in English. Topics covered include counting, important vocabulary for mathematics, pronouns (nominative, objective, and possessive), parts of the body, health and health expressions, language usually found on forms, and in school and everyday expressions. The target population is generally stated as Lao-speaking people, but the interest and level of the dialogues are suitable for secondary students to adults. At the back of the book is a 68-page English-Lao glossary/dictionary.

DICTIONARY OF MONG-NJUA. Thomas A. Lyman. Mouton 1974; Walter de Gruyter Distributors.

This is a work for linguists and anthropologists. Mong Njua (=Blue/Green Hmong) words and phrases are listed in an alphabet which is a cross between a phonemic and phonetic transcription; the words and phrases are translated into idiomatic English, and borrowings from other languages are noted. The introduction contains a guide to the alphabet used; some information on the structures of compound words; a chart of correlations between the alphabet used and the commonly used roman alphabet; and explanations of ways the words have been classified and listed in the dictionary; an extensive bibliography (mostly anthropological) of various Hmong groups throughout China and Southeast Asia; and a list of studies of other ethnic groups in Southeast Asia; and a list of Hmong sub-groups. In the appendices, there are --besides information contained in this guide -- English-Mong Njua lists of body terms, colors, ethnic names, minerals and oils, tools, instruments and weapons; Mong Njua-English lists of terms pertaining to weaving, vegetation, sickness and medicine, rice, opium and related artifacts, kin numeratives, the husking-treadle, and compass points.
